

The Bee

NEE PUBLISHING COMPANY
Started the Post office at Lexington as Second class matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:

One year, strictly in advance..... $1.00
Two Months..... $1.25
Three Months..... $1.50
Four Months..... $1.75
Five Months..... $2.00
Six Months..... $2.25
Subscription copies mailed free on application.
Postage extra, 1 cent per issue.
Obstinate notices will be charged extra.
Rate for the paper, 1 cent per issue.
Extra postage, 1 cent per issue.
Address all communications to

THE BEE,
Lexington, Ky.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1894.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For Congressman Second District.

E. G. SEBREE, Jr.

For County Judge.

JAMES H. FOX.

For County Attorney.

For County Clerk.

GEORGE R. LYNN.

For Sheriff.

J. H. LUNSFORD.

For Assessor.

J. D. CLARK.

For Jailer.

J. S. FRANKLIN.

For Surveyor.

DABNEY BISHOP.

For Coroner.

G. W. GOWER.

The perfidy is accomplished and the dishonesty is complete. Grove Cleveland has vetoed the Democratic platform—New York Sun, (Dem.)

The Republicans of this county have just reason to feel proud of their party, ticket, as it is composed of splendid material, and just the kind of men to lead the party to victory this fall.

Many of the voters of Hopkins county had the pleasure last week to take next Congressmen, the Hon. E. G. Sebree, by the hand and wish him God speed on his journey through the district, while he consults the wishes of his constituents he is to represent.

Congress made a mistake. The Friends who have so wisely sanctioned the mistake. The boldness of the Friends could have been the best—and was the right one. We profoundly regret it was not taken.—Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.)

THOUSANDS of Democrats in this district have thus far failed to see how or in what manner they have been benefited by a Democratic Administration and are therefore almost on the fence in a political sense, and need only approaching with convincing facts, such as the Republicans have in store to bring them over on the right side.

Often is the remark heard among Democrats that they have no candidate for Congress in this district this year, and they either must take their choice of the two Populist candidates in the field or else vote for the Republican nominee. Such a condition of affairs was never before known in this portion of Kentucky.

E. G. SEBREE, the Republican candidate for Congress, in this the Second Congressional District, is a young man who believes in the progressive ideas of the present age, and for him the young voters can cast their vote, feeling assured that their interests will be safe in his hands, while those more advanced in age, now see the necessity of putting young men full of energy in the front to fight their battles.

With either Vance or McClain to lead them, the Democrats of this Congressional district would be strong and vital, but now, with one at the head whose policies have been carefully weighed and found wanting, there is little encouragement for them to roll up their sleeves and go in to win.

National Capital.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

LEXINGTON, KY., Sept. 3, '94.
TO HON. J. B. HARVEY, Chairman
of the Hopkins County Republican Committee:

MY DEAR SIR.—The Republican Party of Hopkins County, in convention assembled, honored me with the nomination as its candidate for County Attorney, for which I am profoundly grateful. Previous to my nomination, owing to the wishes of my family and to certain matters of business I had reluctantly decided to decline, and to a considerable extent, to re-select. I went before the convention with the understanding that I could not accept unless the obstacles were removed. I have been willing, as I am now, to make any reasonable sacrifice to serve my party, but duty to my good old father and other reasons more pressing than my desire to contribute to this office, caused me to decline this office, which I did with great reluctance.

It is not surprising that the new tariff bill, in consequence of having undergone no careful revision in the conference committee and considering its rough and stony path, should contain more or less errors of punctuation and orthography; but under the circumstances, thirty-one is not a large number, and capable of correction before they can entail any great mischief upon the country. So far as I have had time, with the hope that I may be of service to my friends in other ways and with my grateful thanks for their many kindnesses,

Yours truly,
C. J. WADDILL.

TALIAFERRO'S RESIGNATION.

LEXINGTON, KY., Sept. 3, '94.
TO HON. J. B. HARVEY, Chairman
of the Hopkins County Republican Committee:

DEAR SIR.—The Republicans of Hopkins County nominated me as their candidate for County Attorney, and I regret to say, that I cannot accept the nomination for reasons known to me. I am sensible of the honor of the nomination, and I express my sincere thanks to the Republicans of Hopkins. I would gladly serve my party as its candidate if circumstances permitted, and this not being possible now, I will work for its success in the ranks.

Yours truly,
JOHN TALIAFERRO.

Sept. 11, 1894.

GEORGE R. LYNN ACCEPTS THE NOMINA-TION FOR COUNTY CLERK.

LEXINGTON, KY., Sept. 5, '94.
TO HON. J. B. HARVEY, Chairman
of the Hopkins County Republican Committee:

DEAR SIR.—I have been duly notified that you, by the direction of the County Committee, have appointed me as a Republican candidate for the office of County Clerk of the Hopkins County.

The vacancy in the list of Republican candidates for County offices caused by the resignation of Mr. J. N. Tallyferro, to accept the appointment willingly, as it is a platitum to me, and I pledge my time and best efforts to secure the success of our ticket. Thanking you and your committee and the great party which you represent for the honor, I am, Yours truly,
GEORGE R. LYNN.

APPEAL TO THE VOTERS OF HOPKINS COUNTY.

LEXINGTON, KY., Sept. 5, '94.
TO THE VOTERS OF HOPKINS CO.

As the Republican candidate for County Clerk of Hopkins County I solicit your support. Owing to the limited time that I will have, it is impossible for me to make a thorough canvass and to call upon all of you personally. I would like to do. I regard the office of County Clerk as an important public trust, and if I am elected I promise the people a faithful and impartial administration of my office.

For Jailer, J. S. FRANKLIN.
For Surveyor, DABNEY BISHOP.
For Coroner, G. W. GOWER.

The perfidy is accomplished and the dishonesty is complete. Grove Cleveland has vetoed the Democratic platform.—New York Sun, (Dem.)

The Republicans of this county have just reason to feel proud of their party, ticket, as it is composed of splendid material, and just the kind of men to lead the party to victory this fall.

Many of the voters of Hopkins county had the pleasure last week to take next Congressmen, the Hon. E. G. Sebree, by the hand and wish him God speed on his journey through the district, while he consults the wishes of his constituents he is to represent.

Congress made a mistake. The Friends who have so wisely sanctioned the mistake. The boldness of the Friends could have been the best—and was the right one. We profoundly regret it was not taken.—Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.)

Thousands of Democrats in this district have thus far failed to see how or in what manner they have been benefited by a Democratic Administration and are therefore almost on the fence in a political sense, and need only approaching with convincing facts, such as the Republicans have in store to bring them over on the right side.

Never before did the Republic party enter a campaign with the intent, artillery and navy on their side, and that furnished them by their political opponents, and with whom every Democrat, especially disarmed, they ought to be able to storm the breastworks of their political adversary and capture the coveted prizes.

Often is the remark heard among Democrats that they have no candidate for Congress in this district this year, and they either must take their choice of the two Populist candidates in the field or else vote for the Republican nominee. Such a condition of affairs was never before known in this portion of Kentucky.

E. G. SEBREE, the Republican candidate for Congress, in this the Second Congressional District, is a young man who believes in the progressive ideas of the present age, and for him the young voters can cast their vote, feeling assured that their interests will be safe in his hands, while those more advanced in age, now see the necessity of putting young men full of energy in the front to fight their battles.

With either Vance or McClain to lead them, the Democrats of this Congressional district would be strong and vital, but now, with one at the head whose policies have been carefully weighed and found wanting, there is little encouragement for them to roll up their sleeves and go in to win.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3, 1894.

The farewell scenes of the session of Congress were exceptionally quiet and subdued. Commenting upon this, a well-known Democratic member of the House said to me yesterday: "When Congress assembled for the regular session, full of hope and determination, I formed a mental picture of the closing scenes of the House—a picture full of life, peopled with enthusiastic Democrats throwing up their hats and singing hosannas of rejoicing; for I figured the session would close with the ought division of the tariff law, and strengthens its position when such a bill is introduced." Then he overwrote: "For an important reason, however, the Democrats, especially adapted to the spirit of the 'Anti-Suffrage Prescription' is no longer in its power. If it ever fails to benefit or cure, it can only be because it does not have ready that which it needs."

In the chamber at the foot of the shaft, as we descended, a group of men were reading. They sat about in cushioned chairs, with their feet propped up on the floor, and regarded them. Then suddenly the study in black faces and crimson and orange robes vanished. We were out in the open air, and the sun shone brightly. We were in the garden, the engineer sat with his hand on a lever and his eye on the little model of the shaft, behind a miniature elevator which was moving slowly up and down. He was leaning forward, looking intently at the engine, and his face was flushed with exertion.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"The engine is not running," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The water pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"The pump is not working," I said.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

The Bee

"By Industry we Thrive."

L. & N. TIME TABLE.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS AT
Mail	10:30 a. m.
Night Express	10:30 p. m.
Passenger	10:30 a. m.
Providence and Madisonville	10:30 a. m.
Leave	10:30 a. m.
Mail	10:30 a. m.
Night Express	10:30 p. m.
Passenger	10:30 a. m.
Kingsville Association	10:30 p. m.
Providence and Madisonville	10:30 a. m.

In effect Sunday, May 6, 1895.

W. W. ETRIDGE, Agent.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS AT

NORTONVILLE,

C. O. & S. W. R. R.
GOING EAST.
Memphis to Central City	5:30 p. m.
Pelton to Louisville	5:30 p. m.
Memphis to Louisville	5:30 p. m.
GOING WEST.
Central City to Memphis	7:30 a. m.
Memphis to Louisville	7:30 a. m.

Earlington Happenings.

News Notes—Personal Paragraphs and Other Doings at Home Worthy of Special Mention.

"Now is the winter of our discontent," might be deemed applicable to the average school child, after a long and pleasant vacation.

For bilious fevers and infantile disorders use Ayer's Ague Cure. It is success guaranteed to all according to directions.

Miss Clark caught a battle in his foot the other day, and they say he caught a pint of blood from the wound.

KARL'S CLOVER ROOT, the Blood purifier gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures Constipation, etc., etc. It is sold by St. Bernard Drug Store.

Over 1,600 visitors passed through the St. Bernard building on Friday and Saturday, the closing days of the fair.

George W. Bain, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., will deliver a lecture at the Church of Christ in Madisonville, Friday evening, September 1st, at 8 o'clock. Admission, 25cts.

SILHOUETTE'S CURE is sold on a guarantee. It cures Incipient Consumption. It is the best Cough Cure. Only one dose, 25cts., 50cts., and $1.00. For sale at St. Bernard Drug Store.

Mister Willis Bowlin, white oil curer, corrugated and colored Canning Company, Farina stock, and the like, were recently cut his leg with the corn-shale he was using at the time. Dr. Jackson dressed his wound and the little fellow is getting all right.

Our dear old mother has been passing away and now in her last days and cheerful appearance.—She will open next Monday, and we trust the first pupil who mars the beautiful interior of the room.

The storeroom recently vacated by Dulin, McLeod & Co., is now occupied by W. C. McLeod, who is a young man of great promise. He has a splendid opportunity to "spread himself like a green bay tree."

Mrs. T. S. Hawkins, Chattanooga, Tenn., says: "Shiloh's Vitalizer—SAVED MY LIFE! I consider it the best remedy I ever used. It is a safe, reliable, non-purposative, Liver and Kidney trouble in a single dose, 75cts. For sale by St. Bernard Drug Store.

Under the department heading, "Religious Corner," will be found all notices of a religious nature. This department in the paper receives a cordial welcome, and all kinds of meetings and happenings among the different Churches, Sunday schools and other religious bodies, will be faithfully chronicled from time to time.

Ayer's Sarapicilia is one of the few remedies which are recommended by every school of medicine. Its strength, purity and efficacy are well established to aid us in our efforts to insure the welfare of all other blood purifiers whatever. Ayer's Sarapicilia leads all.

"Old foker," Our worthy citizen, T. D. Walker, the famous, familiarly known as "T. D. Walker," spent several days last week in Monarch Mine, covering the site of the old mine, and the new company's new brick store, and the elegant residence of W. F. Anderson, superintendent of the work. Mr. Walker is a man, if not one of Earlington's oldest citizens, and his visit to the old mine, was no occasion as simple indispensable as passing among us. May he live long and enjoy the fruits of his labors.

FOR SALE.—The furniture and fixtures of a 40 room hotel. The best state in the city, adjoining the L. & N. R. Freight and Passenger Depot. The bar is good for $6,000 a year. Established so as to be run in first class style, with all modern improvements. Rent $10 per month.

Geo. B. Nash, Louisville, Ky.

A Nut for City Dads to Crack.

One of our oldest citizens, T. D. Walker, the famous, familiarly known as "T. D. Walker," spent several days last week in Monarch Mine, covering the site of the old mine, and the new company's new brick store, and the elegant residence of W. F. Anderson, superintendent of the work. Mr. Walker is a man, if not one of Earlington's oldest citizens, and his visit to the old mine, was no occasion as simple indispensable as passing among us. May he live long and enjoy the fruits of his labors.

FOR SALE.—The furniture and fixtures of a 40 room hotel. The best state in the city, adjoining the L. & N. R. Freight and Passenger Depot. The bar is good for $6,000 a year. Established so as to be run in first class style, with all modern improvements. Rent $10 per month.

Geo. B. Nash, Louisville, Ky.

A Nut for City Dads to Crack.

in the Ben Man's ear the other day, the effect that "Our state have not required all incorporated towns to put in a possible shape all streets and alleys leading to and from School houses and Court-houses," said Frank D. Walker, a man of good sense, but his eyes, inquired why out City Dads didn't pay some attention to that "gush" in the middle of the street in front of the school building, and leading Methodist Hill? We don't know why, but we suppose our "old foker" is right.

Filled Plant tubing Pines.

Stevens—intense, itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching, all relieved in common time. It is a strong emollient, and coming very sore. Braces' Ointment stops the pain and bleeding, heals, and is a most valuable salve. At druggists, or by mail, for so small a sum. Dr. Swasey & Son, Philadelphia of Nature.

A Wonderful Freak

Present, in this city, is the person of one of the greatest curiosities of the age, a chicken with two well defined heads. This little prodigy was hatched out with both the rest, was able to peck with one head, and then the other; however, as the old stage goes, "the birdie died before the doggie." So it happened in the case of this little chick's career, was "nipped in the bud." One of the old barn-yards, so to speak, to preserve this wonderful freak of nature, placed it in a bottle and exhibited it now exhibits it to his friends, giving a brief history of its arrival and sudden demise.

Buckeye's Artesian Spring.

The best save in the world for Cuts, Sores, Sore Throat, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, and all Skin Diseases. It is perfectly cured.

It gives perfect satisfaction. Price 25 cents per bottle. For sale by St. Bernard Drug Store.

A Runaway.

While old gentlemen Kinsey, who had just returned from Madisonville last Wednesday afternoon their horses ran away, overrunning the road, and severely injured. The old gentleman had several horses, but is now more at ease than ever at Mr. Woodridge's, and will likely recover. The horses were both severely injured and are able to be out. Fortunately, Dr. Jackson happened along and rendered timely aid in relieving their pains. It seems the old gentleman was riding on a wagon with the males rattled on the wagon bed with him. This so frightened the horses that they sprang over a log and threw the result above stated.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases.

Simply apply "SWANSON'S OINTMENT." No internal medicine required. Cure ten thousand cases of skin diseases on the face, hands, neck, leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWANSON'S OINTMENT.

An Unique Addition to the Library.

The St. Bernard building, last week contained the Library a most interesting and valuable collection of minerals, one hundred in number. As soon as a case can be arranged they will be placed in the Reading Room. In addition to unique specimens from among the most noted mineralogists, there are among others Alumite from Hungary, Sphalerite from Mississippi, Quartzite from New Zealand, Opal from Mexico, Quartz from Brazil and so on till almost every quarter of the globe is represented in this collection. A more interesting and valuable collection of minerals has never been made to the already extensive library, and the patrons of this well founded institution will surely highly appreciate the contribution.

A. M. Bailey, well known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has been for many years troubled with chronic diarrhea, and with fits of constipation with little relief until she obtained Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy which has cured her.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

W. H. Waddill, capital when they were passing through Madisonville, and knowing the hunting grounds, and the country where the kind of game was to be found, said that when he was left on the trail of the Indians he was lost, but fortunately he had a gun.

John G. Mager, Editor of the Sunbeam, Webster, N. Y., writes: "I consider the St. Bernard building, next to the Madisonville Fair, the best in the country, and the best in the world."

</div

